

Your Thermostat's Green Button Can Help Save The Environment

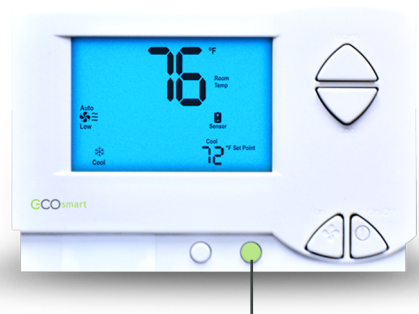

Your thermostat comes equipped with an energy-saving green button. By pressing the green button, your room enters an energy savings mode.

Even without pressing the green button, when you are not occupying your room, the temperature is allowed to drift slightly. Upon returning to your room, the temperature begins its return to the set point. You will likely not notice the temperature difference.

By pressing the green button, you are allowing extra time (typically less than 5 minutes) for the temperature to return to its set point.

When you press the green button, the display will show "Savings Mode".

- Press the green button to enter savings mode.
- Press the green button again to exit savings mode.
